Course Description

This course is designed to increase veterinarians’ knowledge of diagnostic techniques in equine lameness and orthopedics, and to inform them of recent advances in treatment options for orthopedic diseases and injuries to horses. The course material is designed to contain practical information of interest and benefit to the general equine practitioner and those specializing in the upper level equine competitors in show and racing. The lectures will be short to keep a stimulating pace while allowing the coverage of a broad variety of orthopedic and lameness related topics.

A large number of the lecture will be given by Ohio State’s two new equine surgeons, Drs. Liz Santschi and Yvonne Elce, who will be introduced by our new department head and equine surgeon, Dr. Rustin Moore. There will also be lectures by our other equine surgeons and internists in their areas of expertise. There will be time to converse with our faculty members both during discussions, after each lecture, at lunch, and at dinner. We also hope to enjoy an Ohio State University Hockey game with you following dinner; the tickets are complimentary. We look forward to introducing you to our surgeons, and to having you spend time with all of our new vibrant team of equine specialists at The Ohio State University.
